Aroustons. Thibedau's building, near the tannery at Presque Isle, used for a store-house, was burned Sunday night, says the Arosetook Republican. Loss estimated at $1,000.

Edward Henderson, the alleged oat and potato smuggler of Hodgdon, has been held by Commissioner Clifford at Portland in $1,000 for his appearance at the December term of the District Court. He gave bonds.

Why not have a canning factory in Presque Isle? asks the Heraid. Sweet corn can be successfully raised here for canning purposes. Besides corn, any amount of squashes, pumpkins, raspberries strawberries, etc., can be furnished. One would think that a canning establishment would be as profitable as a starch factory.

would be as profitable as a starch factory.

The Electric Light station or building at Presque Isle is completed, ready to receive the machaery, a portion of which, including the dynamo, is already there. The engine was shipped from Boston last Monday and the boiler will be ready for shipment this week. When that arrives and le placed in position, the company will be grinding out electricity.

Last Sunday forencon the storehouse belonging to Frank L. White, in the rear of his stable at the north end of Presque Isle, was burned. Mr. White, who sends out peddiars, had a large quantity of eggs, together with dry goods in the building and estimates his loss at about $2.000. It is supposed that the fire originated around the stove pipe. He had kindled a fire in the stove about nine o'clock that morning to keep the eggs from freezing, and the building was burned about eleven o'clock.

The curing of finnan haddies, one of our chief fish-curing industries, originated in Portland, so far as this continent is concerned. The Portland Express says Thos. McEvan, a Scotchman, began to prepare this favorite delicacy of his countrymen in Portland in 1856. He sent his goods to Canada for sale but they, soon found their way into the markets of his country. The fish used is the common haddock, and the name, which was originally Finnon Haddock, came from the fish and from the Scotch town of Findon where they were first cured. Mr. McEvan gave the new form of the name to the product of his establishment. The curing season lasts from October lat to April 1st, and one Portland firm puts up nearly a million pounds a year.

Business is likely to be brisk in Buckaport this winter. Central wharf is being replanked and a store house one hundred feet long by forty feet will be built to accommodate the freight of the New York steamer, which will land there this winter. It is also expected that the Maine Central Railroad will lay about five hundred feet of additional track to facilitate the increase of business there this winter, which will probably require an extra lope and the state of the state which will probably require an extra lo-with the vote for Governor last year There is nothing slow about Pennsylvania

Foraker's majority indicates that Ohio is fond of wind — Baston Globe Our contemporary as usual is wrong Gov Forsker's majority indicates the high President Cleveland who is also the hearty pant soldier and admirable official on the er of the stripe that receives most faydr one hand and their disguist at the ballot box in the eyes of Mr Cleveland. By the way stuffers and forgery manipulation repre- the Post atill maintains absolute silence as No. 3 State Street. sented in the candidacy of Mr Cleveland's regards the President's enthusiastic supfriend, Powell, on the other

Immediately after the election a Cleveland organ headed its returns, "A possible Democratic Governor in Iowa" Complete returns show the re-election of Gov Col Fellows with copious extracts from Larrabee by a plurality of 15,810 votes his reaped as furnished by the Park Three This is considerably more than twice the Harper's Weekly and the World would now Republican plurality in 1885 and over 1,000 be in order greater than the Republican plurality in 1886 for Secretary of State The figures do not indicate any tendency toward Democracy in Iowa! A "possible Demo-cratic Governor is good

Lverybody was reheved when the strug gl. was over and nothing is more unprof-lable than an attempt to continue an elec-tion contest after the voting day. The clobe always makes a hard fight before election—Boston Globe

Oh yes, the Globe made a great fight but when asked wha it has to show for points to a Republican plurality more than double what it was in 1886 when the Glo also made another of its hard fights W. trust our contemporary will keep right o with its political fights they are so profi able for the Republicans

Ex Senator Thurman having called Gen Jackson of Georg u, a fool and a crank, the ex Confederate who was good enough Democrat to be selected by President Cleve land as Minister to Mexico, retaliates by characterizing the "old Roman as one of a ' swarm of insects which have been buzzing about his name. He contends tha there was nothing wrong in his Macon speech and aguin sings the praise of the The 'new South 'does not materialize auspiciously. There are too many unrepentant rebels of the Jackson Indiana,

The conduct of the Democratic party since it came into power in the State has been so violent inconsiderate and injudications as to alienate the element of good claimant of the present comparign has been conspicuous for the presence of the disreputable element upon the platform and in the caucus—Providence Journal,

There are some foot-notes that should go with this table

1 The Paulic States—California, Oregon and Nevada—are put down in the sure Republican column They are sure with the right kind of a candidate—not otherwise December 1 State is placed in

Had the Journal posses ed'the editorial pacity and air reliability would have come Virginia as a waining to the people prior to the last electron instead of a plaintive wall Connecticut, Indiana and New Jersey went bring about We are glid, however, to See that the present editor is getting his eves of en even at this late day the administration—one or the other must they should carry New York and lose the go This is the climax to a constant quar other doubtful States, they would fall 12 rel that has been a regular feature of the votes short. In order to was they must stated.

Interior Department against Gen. 2 Secreta. South Carry both New York and Indiana ar Name. Interior Department since 'Gen' Sparks carry both New York and Indiana, or New was elevated to his present position | Ibe | York, New Jersey and Connecticut, besides | Department of the latest property of t 7 пироп hum, tume und agam, but Sparks cannot be squelched worth a cent and positively refuses to admit that he is not the biggest toad in the puddle. The grand rupture places the President in a bad fix as he was heardly and New Jersey. m t that he is not the biggest toad in the President to a bad fix as he can hardly fail to recognize the demand of the Secretary, and to bounce Sparks is to abandon the great "anti monopolist" boom the General has been nursing It is sad to see this fail- Connecticut ure on the part of the Democrats to dwell

The Portland Evening Express says The correspondent of the Argus at Augusta possesses an exuberant imagination Republican State Committee meeting was in fact all that he says it was not-confident, earnest enthusiastic The speeches of the Senators and representatives in Congress, were all hopeful, not to say jubilant, in tone The temper of the meeting was indeed admirable in every respect and showed a unanimity of feeling and pur poses that bodes ill to the friends of reaction in Maine We have attended many similar meetings in other States, but do not courage remember ever to have witnessed one where there was a better feeling manifested or one more promising for the Republican party Maine will set the ball in motion next year, and she will do it grandly too No Republican present at this committee meeting could fail to have this assurance brought home to him in full measure. The result of the November election was felt to be a forerunner of Republican victory in

The state as now fixed seems to be to place Mr Vilas at the head of the Interior Department to succeed Mr Lamar, thus depriving Assistant Secretary Muldrow of e a veted promotion, while the aspiration of Mr btevenson to assume the entire direction of the Post-office Department are to be ignored in the interest of Don M Dickinson who is looked upon as a probable successor to Mr Vilas I'he Washington correspondent of the Boston Jour-nal writes "The appointment of Don Dickleson to the Post-office Department is interpreted to mean that another attempt is to be made to carry, and that some con idence has been planed in the prediction, both Michigan and Wisconsin for the Democrata Don Dickinson has made promises of that sort before, and expected, as leader of the Greenback-Democratic fusion alliance, to carry the Legislature of that Siste, but Mr Stockbridge a very radical Republican, is the successor in the United States Senate of Mr. Conger, As for Wisconsin, the Republicant ridicule the suggestion that Mr. Vilas, as Cabinet officer or Vice Presidential candidate, can carry that State, and they suggest that a prophet is not without honor save in his own

Gen. Banks the Boston Mugwumps would have to roost lower than ever. The Mugwump organs have repeatedly repudiated him as representing an element entirely antagonistic to the Administration, but the President, to their extreme discomfort, came up smillingly with an indorsement of his candidacy, and his appointment now would necessitate an appailing

Should Mr. Lovering secure the United

amount of hypocrisy on their part to get around their past utterances, or at least it would be appalling to any other than a Mugwamp editor doubt about the Republicans being able to carry Indiana in 1883

The gratifying news comes comes from Maryland that, upon an examination of the men elected to the new Legislature, it appears that, although Boss Gorman has saved not been quite so enthusiastic over 'Maryland, my Maryland'

Pennsylvania, that stalwart Blaine State, rolls up a Republican gain of over 20,000, the lawn and it there is a good channel of securing an election law which will put an out to the frauds by which alone he has retained power. Not only have the rolls up a Republican galo of about 1400 over the vote for State Freaturer in 1885 and a gain of over 2 000 as compared with the vote for Governor last year.

One Hundred Thousand People in Trafalgar Square.

LONDON, Nov. 13. The riot proclamation of Sir Charles Warren, head of the London police, forbidding the holding of a meeting in Trafalgar Square to-day, was placarded through London last night. The scene in Trafalgar Square to-day, has not been equalled since 1866, when people asserting the right of public meeting destroyed the rallings around Hyde Park. Hour thousand policemen took possession of the approaches to the square early. In a short time various societies of Socialists, Radicals and Irish approached from every direction, headed by bands, carrying banuers and mottoes. The police attacked and dispersed each group as it arrived.

LOVE W. B. GOULD & CO., Sole Agents, Bangor. COUNTESS NARONA

A tail, bony woman, in the antumn of life, with sunken eyes and iron gray last, rose stiffly from her chair and salited the ladies with stern submission as they opened the door. A person of unblemished character, evidently—but not without visible draw hacks. Big bushy eyebrows, an awfully deep and solemn voice, a barsh, unbending manner, a complete absence in her fgure of the undulating lines characteristic of the sex, presented virtue in this excellent person under its least alluring aspect. Strangors on a first introduction to her were accustomed to wonder why site was not a man.

"Are you pretty well, Mrs. Rolland?"
"Is there anything I can do for you?"
"Your ladyship can do me a great favor if you will please speak to my character while I was in your service. I am offered a place to wait on an invalid lady who has lately come to live in this neighborhood."
"Ah, yes.—I have heard of her. A Mrs. Carbury, with a very pretty nice. I am told.

"Ah, yes—I have neard of ner. A arrs, Carbury, with a very pretty niece, I am told. But, Mrs. Rolland, you left my service some time ago. Mrs. Carbury will surely expect you to refer to the last mistress by whom you were employed."

A flash of virtuous indignation irradiated Mrs. Rolland's sunken eyes, She coughed before answered, as if her "last mistress" straid in hea threat.

"I have explained to Mrs. Carbury, my

"I have explained to Mrs. Carbury, my lady that the person I last served—I really camer give her title in your ladyship's presence—has left England for America. Mrs. Carbury knows that I quitted the person of my own free will and knows why, and approves of my conduct so far. A word from your ladyship will be amply sufficient to get me the situation."

"Very well, Mrs. Rolland, I have no objection to be your reference, under the circumstances. Mrs. Carbury will find me at home to-morrow until 2 o'clock."

"Mrs. Carbury is not well enough to leave the house, my lady. Her niece, Miss Haldane, will call and make the inquiries, if your ladyship has no objection."

"I have not the least objection. The pratty niece carries her own welcome with her. Walt a minute, Mrs. Rolland. This lady is Miss Lock wood—my husband's cousto, and Watta minute, Mrs. Rolland. This Indy is Miss Lockwood—my husband's cousin, and my friend. She is anxious to speak to you about the courier who was in the late Lord Montbarry's service at Venice."

sation. "I regret to hear it, my lady," was all she said.
"Perhaps you have not been informed of what happened after you left Venice?" Agnes ventured to add. "Ferrari left the place secretly, and has never been heard of since."

Mrs. Rolland mystoriously closed her eyes—as if to exclude some vision of the lost courier, which was of a nature to disturb a respectable woman. "Nothing that Mr. Ferrari could do would surprise me," she replied, in her deepest bass tones.

"You speak rather harshly of him," said Agnes.

"You speak rather harshly of him," said Agnes.

Mrs. Rolland suddenly opened her eyes again. "I speak harshly of nobody without reason," she said. "Mr. Fetrari behaved to me, Miss Lockwood, as no man living has ever behaved—before or since."

"What did he do?"

Mrs. Rolland answered with a stony stare of horror: "He took liberties with me."

Young Lady Moutharry ruddenly turned aside and put her handkerchief over her mouth in convulsions of suppressed laughter.

Mrs. Rolland went on, with a grim enjoyment of the bewilderment which her reply had produced in Agnes. "And when I insisted on an apology, miss, he had the audacity to say that the life at the palace was dull, and be didn't know how else to antuse himself!"

"I am afraid I have hardly made myself, understood," said Agnes. "I am not speaking to you out of any interest in Ferrari. Are you aware that he is married!"

"I pity his wife," said Mrs. Rolland.

"She lenaturally in great grief about him,"

Agues proceeded.

"She ought to thank God she is rid of Elm,"
Mrs. Roland interposed.

Agues still persisted. "I have known Mrs.
Ferrari from her childhood, and I am sincerely anxious to help her in this matter. Did you notice anything while you were at Ven-ice that would account for her husband's extraordinary disappearance? On what sert of

"On terms of familiarity with his mistress," "On terms of familiarity with his mistress," said Mrs. Rolland, "which were, simply sick-ening to a respectable English sorvant. She used to encourage him to talk to her about all his affairs—how he got on with his wife, and how pressed he was for money, and such like—just as if they were equals. Contemptible—that's what I call it."

"My lord used to live shut up with his studies and his sorrows," Mrs. Rolland answered, with a hard solemnity expressive of respect for his lordship's memory. "Mr. Fer-studies and his sorrows," Mrs. Rolland answered, with a hard solemnity expressive of respect for his lordship's memory. "Mr. Ferrari got his money when it was due; and he cared for nothing else. 'If I could afford it I would leave the place, too; but I can't afford it.' Those were the lust words he said to me on the morning when I left the palace. I made no reply, lafter what had happened (on that other oceasion) I was naturally not on speaking terms with Mr. Ferrari."

"Can you really tell me nothing which will throw any light on the matter!"

"Nothing," said Mrs. Rolland, with an undisquised reliab of the disappointment that she was inflicting!

"There was another member of the family at Venice," Agnes feaumed, determined to sift the question to the bottom while she had the chance. "There was Baron Rivar."

Mrs. Rolland lifted her large hands, covered with rusty black gloves, in mute protest against the introduction of Baron Rivar. as a subject of inquiry. "Are you aware, miss," she began, "that I loft my place in consequence of what I observed"—

Agnes stopped her there. "I only wanted to ask." she archalmed "if anything was as if

"Are you aware, miss, that I left my place in consequence of what I observed?" in consequence of what I observed?"

They were a family party at the dinner table that day. The only guest left in the house was a nephew of the new Lord Montharry, the eddest son of his sister! Lady Barville. Lady Montharry could not resist telling the story of the first fund last; attack made on the virtue of Mrs. Rolland, with a comically exact imitation of Mrs. Rolland's deep and dismal voice. Being saised by her imsband what was the object which had brought that formidable person to the house, the naturally mentioned the expected visit of Miss Haldane.
